

The Cidermaking Season

Winter & Spring - Cider and perry making is a seasonal tradition which begins its journey in the Winter Orchard. This is the time for orchard management, the careful pruning and general tidying of the trees being essential for the good health and annual cropping of the orchard. Spring is of course Blossom Time, perhaps the most beautiful time of year to be in a traditional orchard. Bees and other nectar-loving insects will be busying themselves amongst the delicate Spring blossom, helping with the vital process of pollination which will lead to the formation of this year's fruit. A careful eye must also be kept on the fermenting and maturing ciders and perries which were pressed the previous Autumn.

Summer - Early Summer is the time for sampling and assessing the New Season Ciders and Perries, many of which will now be mature and ready to drink. The ciderhouse will be busy with the blending, bottling, and barrelling of ciders and perries ready for sale throughout the Summer. The fruit in the orchard is swelling and ripening in the Summer sun.

Autumn - The busiest time of year for the cidemaker, and probably the hardest work too. Gathering the ripe apples and pears from the orchard is backbreaking work, followed by the hard labour of Milling the fruit to a pulp and Pressing to extract the sweet juice. As Winter sets in, the trees are bare, and the new ciders and perries will be fizzing away with a gentle fermentation.

CAMRA Promote Real Cider & Perry

The Campaign for Real Ale also campaign for Real Cider & Perry. Activities include running Cider Bars at beer festivals and other events, as well as national and regional competitions for real cider and perry, and the pubs which promote these products.

The current CAMRA East Midland Cider & Perry Pub of the Year is the Queens Head, Marlpool, Derbyshire.

A new initiative to help pubs that regularly offer a real cider or perry, is the introduction of a 'Real Cider Sold Here' sticker. Pubs can be nominated, or apply for the scheme themselves. All pubs accredited will receive an eye-catching window sticker, and will also be added to a list of pubs already in the scheme viewable on the CAMRA national website (<http://www.camra.org.uk>). A form to nominate eligible pubs is available on the national CAMRA website. Click on 'ABOUT CIDER' at the top of the page, and scroll down until you see the window sticker image on the right.
